

David Gorden is a landscape architect with Mark M. Holeman, Inc. in Indianapolis where he has been creating and overseeing the care of landscapes for over 30 years. A graduate of the University of Illinois, he has been involved in a variety of professional, environmental and community organizations. Leadership positions have included serving as President of the Indiana Chapter of the American Society of Landscape Architects (ASLA), ASLA's Board of Trustees, President of the Indianapolis Museum of Art's Horticultural Society, and member and chair of the Indiana Board of Registration for Architects and Landscape Architects. He has been particularly active in issues relating to invasive plants and currently serves on the Indiana Invasive Plant Advisory Committee and board of the Midwest Invasive Plant Network (MIPN).

In 2018 he was named a Fellow of ASLA.

David is an enthusiastic and curious traveler, having visited over 75 countries. This includes frequent humanitarian work trips which have taken him to Cuba, Bolivia, Jamaica, Guatemala, El Salvador, and South Africa.

An avid cyclist, he is a three-time participant in the Tour des Trees.